QUICK QUESTION

Why can a fast-food chain bring dinner to your door...

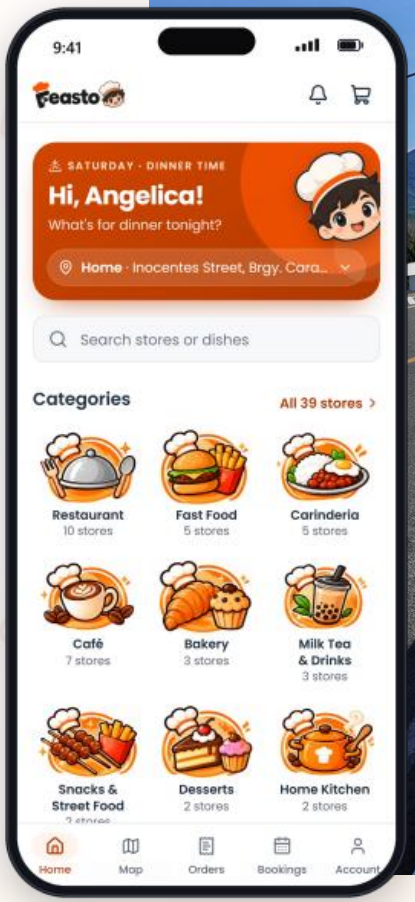

...but your suki carinderia can't even reply to your chat?

THE PROBLEM

Naval still orders food by chat and call

Residents order by chat, then wait

No menu, prices or waiting time in one place, and no way to see where the food is.

Stores lose orders in the inbox

Orders arrive by chat, text and calls, then go on paper. Sales are hard to track.

Riders have no steady stream of jobs

Delivery work depends on who you know, and every peso is collected in cash.

OUR SOLUTION

One app for everyone who feeds Naval

Residents

Order from any Naval store, delivered or for pickup.

Stores

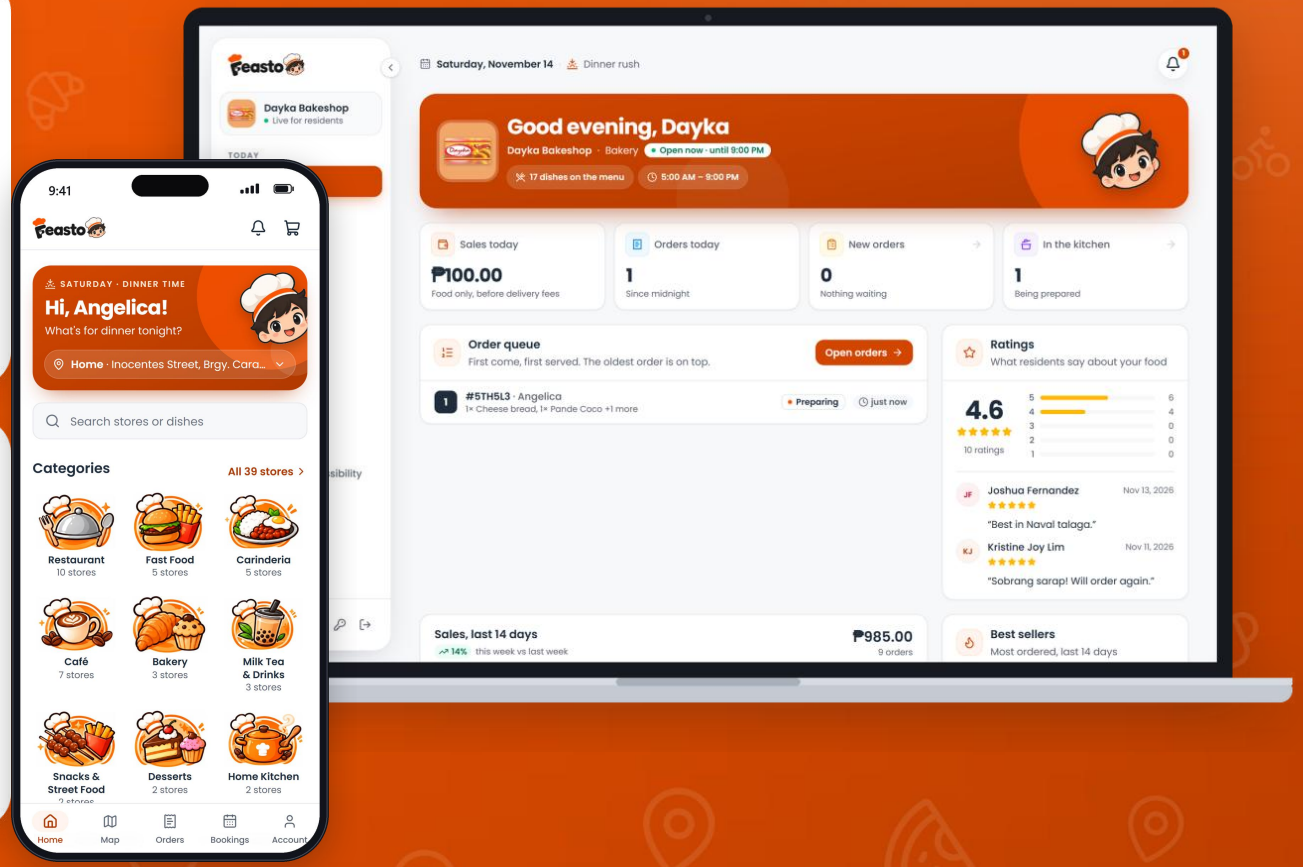

Get orders in one queue, cook, and see every sale.

Riders

Pick up nearby jobs and get paid for each trip.

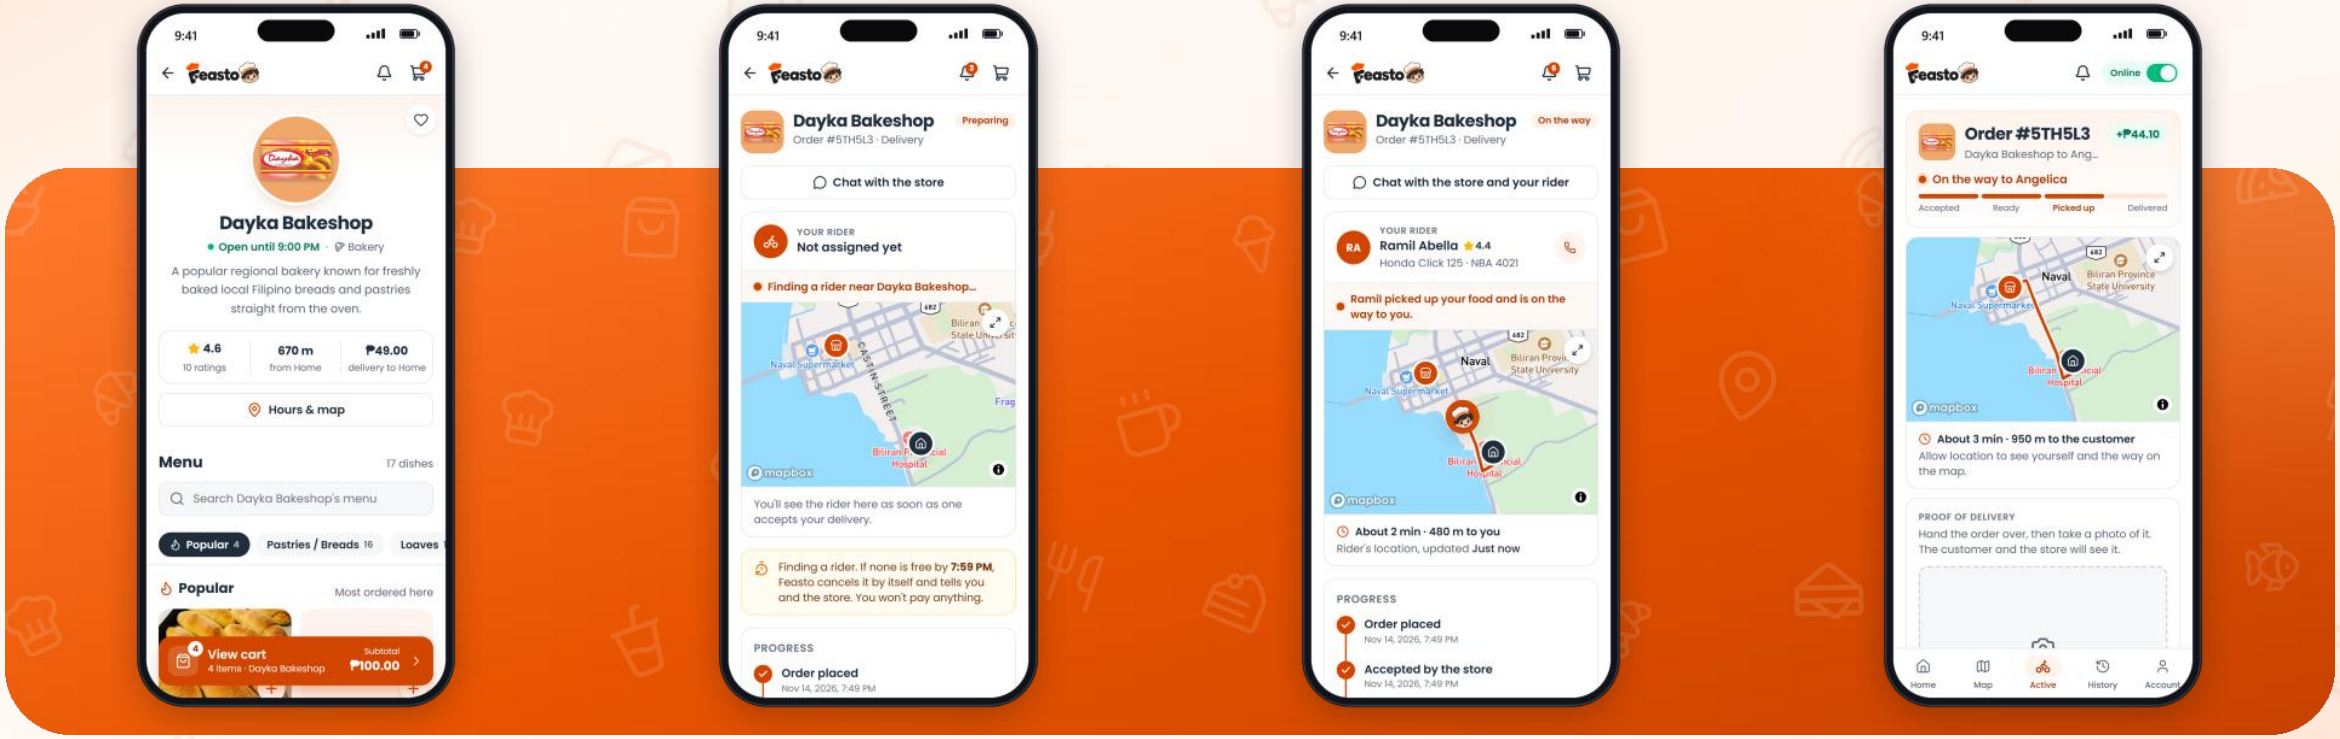

Admin

Approves partners and keeps the marketplace fair.

HOW IT WORKS

From craving to doorstep in four steps

1 Order
Pick a store and add your favorites.

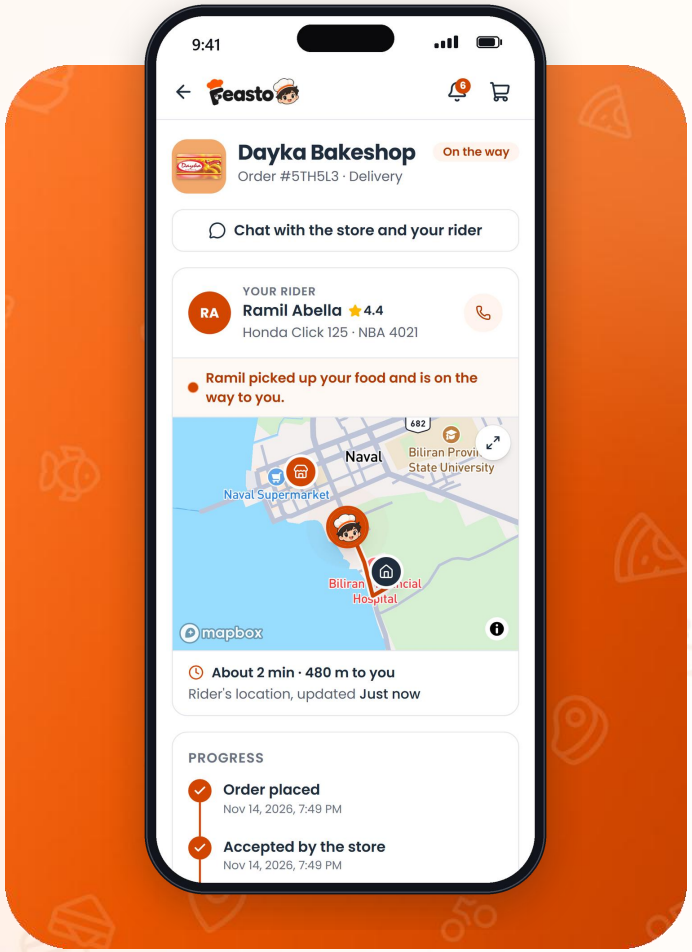

2 Store cooks
The store accepts and starts preparing.

3 Rider delivers
Follow your rider on the map.

4 Everyone gets paid
This rider earns +₱44.10 for the trip.

WHERE WE FIT

Easier than chat, closer than the big apps

Messenger and calls

What most Naval stores use today

- No menu or prices in one place
- Replies get missed at rush hour
- No tracking and no sales records

Big delivery apps

Polished, but made for big cities first

- Small local eateries compete with national chains
- Not focused on Naval's own stores and riders

Feasto

Local and modern, in one app

- Every Naval food spot, menu and price
- Live tracking and online payment
- Local riders, paid automatically
- 10% commission, first 30 days free
